

Ofer Amir

Ofer Amir is a speech-pathologist and an associate professor at the Department of Communication Disorders, Tel-Aviv University, Israel. His professional, academic and research activities revolve around two major fields: voice and its disorders, and stuttering and speech-fluency. Prof. Amir has authored over 70 academic publications, and while his research typically focuses on speech and its disorders, he often branches out to collaborate with experts in adjacent disciplines, such as laryngology, psychology and neuro-imaging. In addition to his extensive academic work, Prof. Amir is a practicing clinician, who focuses on treating children, teenagers and adults with voice disorders, stuttering or other fluency disorders.
